Railroad Change.

Owing to some misunderstanding between the C. H. & D. and the M. R. & L. E. Railroads, the connection heretofore existing at Dayton has been broken off.

The Mad River Road now connects, at Springfield, with the Little Miami, and passengers and freight, to and from Cincinnati, are transmitted over the latter.

Passenger trains run through from Sandusky to Xenia without change.

This route is fully as short as the other and is entirely superior to it in many respects.

The change favorably received by all the papers along the route, and we believe that the interests of the Mad River Road will be greatly benefited thereby.

An accommodation train is now running between Springfield and Dayton.

MARRIED.

In this city, by Rev. E. R. Jewett, Mr. CHAR.

C. MITCHELL, of New Orleans, La., and Miss

FRANCES E. FETTER, of Dayton, Ohio.

In this city, by Rev. Lyman J. Fisher, Mr.

OLIVER H. MARTIN, of Palmyra, Ill., and Miss

KATE T. WHIPPLE, lately Teacher in the High School of this place.

Accompanying the above were two exquisite pieces of cake and what is said to be a gold dollar.

The cake is "done gone" already, but what to do with the dollar, we cannot tell, unless we buy the baby a new frock.

SEED CORN.

There is a general complaint among the farmers of Corn rotting, both in the shock and crib.

This is doubtless owing to the lateness of the season, which prevented much of the crop from maturing, and the extremely cold weather in November. It is supposed that, at least, one-half the corn has lost the germinating principle and consequently will not grow.

Farmers cannot be too careful in the selection of their Seed Corn. It is a dangerous experiment to plant corn, which we do not know to be sound, as we may thereby lose our entire crop next year. Farmers should attend to this matter immediately, before good corn becomes scarce and prices high.

For the Tribune.

VIRTUE.

Yes, I have seen, with raptured heart, One, who could shine, and set her part in life's great drama—steal away, From such dim visions of the day.

And why? Her nature was too noble, then, She could not, with such, bear her load. Her upward visage bright, and true, For heavenly scenes, she'd part with you.

Call her not back—but with her gain,

What she has sought, an heavenly strain;

Then with her rose, in fields of light,

A jewel saved, a gem—so bright.

There, sing of every pure desire, And let your throbbing soul expire, Come now, O death, and give her rest, No more can bound that bleeding breast.

Let all those who admire Beauty with "nothing to wear," put in for the Greek Slave.

WEATHER ITEM.

We are glad to be able this week to record a slight change in the weather, though we cannot vouch for its continuance. On Monday evening, old Boreas began to pepper the face of Mother Earth with his white "powder," and by Tuesday morning her wrinkles and "beauty spots" were entirely obliterated and she looked as bright and beautiful as a vestal virgin. The dull, leaden sounds on our streets have been greatly relieved by the merry music of sleigh-bells and bursts of joyous laughter, that ring out upon the silvery air. We say, "It's well while you're young!"—be merry while the snow lasts.
